

To support frontline health worker do their jobs better, SI curated and conducted problem solving workshops with groups of workers nationwide. The aim was to:

Systematically listen and deconstruct the day to day challenges faced by female health worker including the why and how.

Co-create solutions with workers to help them overcome obstacles and improve their work outcomes; majority of solutions required zero financial investment.

The impact:

“

My self-confidence has grown from participating in this initiative. It is so meaningful that the program has taken the time to listen to our experiences and ideas, and that some of the solutions we proposed are being adopted to improve campaigns as well as our work experience.
